A Visit to a Zoo

Md Nahid
Class-4th A
House: Green

Last Sunday, our school students visited the National Zoo in Mumbai. We were very excited about the trip.

When we reached the zoo, we saw two guards standing at the entrance. After getting our tickets checked, we entered the zoo. The first animal we saw was a monkey. It was jumping from one tree to another and happily eating bananas, which is its favourite food. Next, we saw a lion resting under a tree. Then we visited the tiger enclosure, where the tiger was sleeping on a big rock. We saw many other animals too. As we walked further, we reached the bird section. We saw many beautiful birds chirping on the trees, such as parrots, sparrows, and peacocks. After that, we went to another part of the zoo where there was a large lake that looked almost like a river. Fishes were swimming in the water, and flowers like lotus and water lily were floating on the surface. We also saw aquatic plants like hydrilla and elodea floating in the lake. Then we visited the last part of the zoo, where many trees were planted, such as mango, banana, and peach trees. We saw nests made of twigs on some branches. Big birds like the ostrich were kept in large cages. Near the lake, we saw a crowd of people. When we asked our school in-charge what had happened, he told us that a lion was roaring loudly. At first, we thought the lion was crying, but he was actually roaring because an ant had bitten him. After completing our visit, we came out of the zoo. Our in-charge asked us how the trip was, and all the students happily replied that it was wonderful.

At night, after returning to the school and having dinner, we talked about our zoo visit. Soon after, we went to sleep peacefully, remembering the enjoyable journey.

My Favourite Festival – Eid

Sadaf Aarzu
Class-4th B
House: Red

Eid is a festival that I wait for every year with great excitement. It is my favourite festival because it brings happiness, unity, and blessings for everyone. Eid is celebrated after the holy month of Ramadan. During Ramadan, Muslims fast and pray with devotion.

On the day of Eid, the joy begins early in the morning. We take a bath, wear our best clothes, and go to the mosque or the prayer ground to offer the special prayer called Namaz. The prayer is filled with smiles and warm hugs, and it feels like one big family. After the prayer, we return home where delicious food awaits us. My mother cooks wonderful dishes like biryani, kebabs, chapati with chicken, and especially seviyan, a sweet dessert made with milk and vermicelli. I really enjoy helping in the kitchen and serving the guests. Eid is not only a time to celebrate but also a time to help others. We give food, clothes, and money to the poor so that they can also enjoy Eid. This teaches us kindness, generosity, and the joy of sharing. One special thing about Eid is receiving Eidi, gifts or money from elders. It is fun to count the Eidi and decide whether to spend or save it. I also enjoy visiting relatives, playing with cousins, and clicking photos in our festive clothes. Eid fills our home with laughter and fills my heart with peace. It is truly a festival of love, and that is why Eid is my favourite festival.

After the Eid prayer, people greet each other with "Eid Mubarak" and kind embraces. Any misunderstandings are forgotten, and members of other religions also greet their Muslim friends. Eid spreads harmony, happiness, and brotherhood among all.

My Aim in Life

Md Afridi Alam
Class-6th A
House: Green

Every person must have a clear goal in life to give direction and purpose to their efforts. Without an aim, life becomes meaningless and full of confusion. My aim in life is to become a teacher. I have always believed that teaching is one of the noblest professions in the world. A good teacher shapes the future of students and.

Since childhood, I have been inspired by some of my teachers who not only taught me lessons from books but also taught me values such as honesty, kindness, and discipline. I want to become someone who is respected and remembered throughout a lifetime. As a teacher, I will try my best to make learning interesting and enjoyable. I will encourage students to ask questions, think creatively, and never be afraid of making mistakes. Education is not just about scoring marks; it is about learning and becoming a better human being. To achieve this aim, I study sincerely and try to improve my communication and teaching skills. I know the journey may be difficult, but I am ready to work hard and stay dedicated.

In conclusion, my aim is not just to teach, but to inspire and guide students so they can grow into responsible and successful individuals. This, I believe, will give true meaning to my life.

Pollution

Faizan Shafique
Class-7th A
House: Green

Pollution is one of the most pressing environmental problems facing the world today. It refers to the presence or introduction of harmful substances into our natural surroundings, causing negative effects on all forms of life. With rapid industrialization, urbanization, and human negligence, pollution has become a global concern that affects air, water, land, and even sound levels. If left unchecked, it will continue to harm both the environment and human health.

There are several types of pollution, each with distinct causes and harmful effects.

Air Pollution: Air pollution is primarily caused by emissions from factories, vehicles, and the burning of fossil fuels. It can lead to respiratory problems, heart diseases, and also contributes to global warming and climate change.

Water Pollution: Water pollution results from dumping industrial waste, sewage, and plastics into rivers, lakes, and oceans. This harms aquatic life, makes water unsafe for human use, and spreads water-borne diseases.

Soil Pollution: Soil pollution is often caused by excessive use of chemical fertilizers, pesticides, and improper waste disposal. It reduces soil fertility, affects crop quality, and harms organisms living in the soil.

Noise Pollution: Noise pollution comes from traffic, construction work, factories, and loudspeakers. Though it may not seem harmful, it can cause stress, sleep disturbances, and even loss of hearing over time. All these forms of pollution are interconnected and collectively contribute to climate change, health issues, and the loss of bio-diversity.

Pollution is a serious global issue that requires collective responsibility and action. Governments must enforce strict environmental laws, industries must adopt eco-friendly practices, and individuals must reduce waste, reuse resources, and recycle whenever possible.

Women Empowerment in India

Rahmatullah
Class- 10th A
House: Blue

In many parts of our society, girls have traditionally been given fewer opportunities than boys. Some people still believe that a woman's role is limited to household work. This mindset prevents girls from showing their true potential. Therefore, women empowerment has become an important need in India.

Women empowerment means giving women the freedom, opportunities, and rights to participate different fields of life. Just as boys are encouraged to study, work, and build their careers, girls must also be given the same support.

Education is the first step towards empowerment. When girls receive proper education, they become confident, independent, and capable of making their own decisions. Families and society must change their thinking and invest equally in the education and future of girls.

Today, women in India are proving their abilities in every field. They are becoming doctors, engineers, scientists, teachers, lawyers, pilots, police officers, and even going to space. Great women like Kalpana Chawla, Rani Laxmi Bai, Razia Sultana, Indira Gandhi, Mary Kom, and Kiran Bedi have shown that women can achieve anything they dream of.

Women play important roles both inside and outside the home. They can manage households, take care of children, work in offices, lead companies, serve the nation, and contribute to society in countless ways. Women have talent, intelligence, and strength just like men. They deserve equal respect, opportunities, and rights.

Women empowerment is necessary for the progress of society and the nation. Parents and society must encourage girls to follow their dreams and support them in education, career, and personal growth. Providing equal opportunities and reservation for women in certain fields can help them progress more easily. Women should never be left behind, because whatever a man can achieve, a woman can also achieve. A society becomes truly strong and developed only when its women are empowered.
